Hua Hin

Charm

When a Bangkok family wants a quiet, relaxing weekend by the sea with clean water for swimming and uncrowded fine sandy beach, they go to Hua Hin, just over 200 kms away to the south on Petchkasem Highway. Hua Hin is a charming old-fashioned beach resort and a fishing town of Prachuab Kirikhan Province on the west coast of the Gulf of Thailand.

Swimming off Hua Hin beaches is pure and an unadulterated delight. The water is warm, clear and clean, absolutely untainted by any form of pollution. The beach slopes down so subtly far out into the sea, that the big incoming waves gradually dissipate into soothing and rocking motion of the water, well before reaching the beach. Children down to toddler size can safely frolic in the shallow water of the beach without fear of crashing wave or steep underwater bank.

Klai Kangwol Palace is the official royal summer palace, where HM the King spends most of his time. Here the royal wedding anniversary is celebrated every year on April 28.

Hua Hin in Thai means stone head. Off the main beach are rock outcrops jutting out of the sea water that give the beach its name. To the right of the beach walk, stretches the fabled shoreline of Hua Hin, a white plain of fine sand reaching off to the distant Khao Takiab.

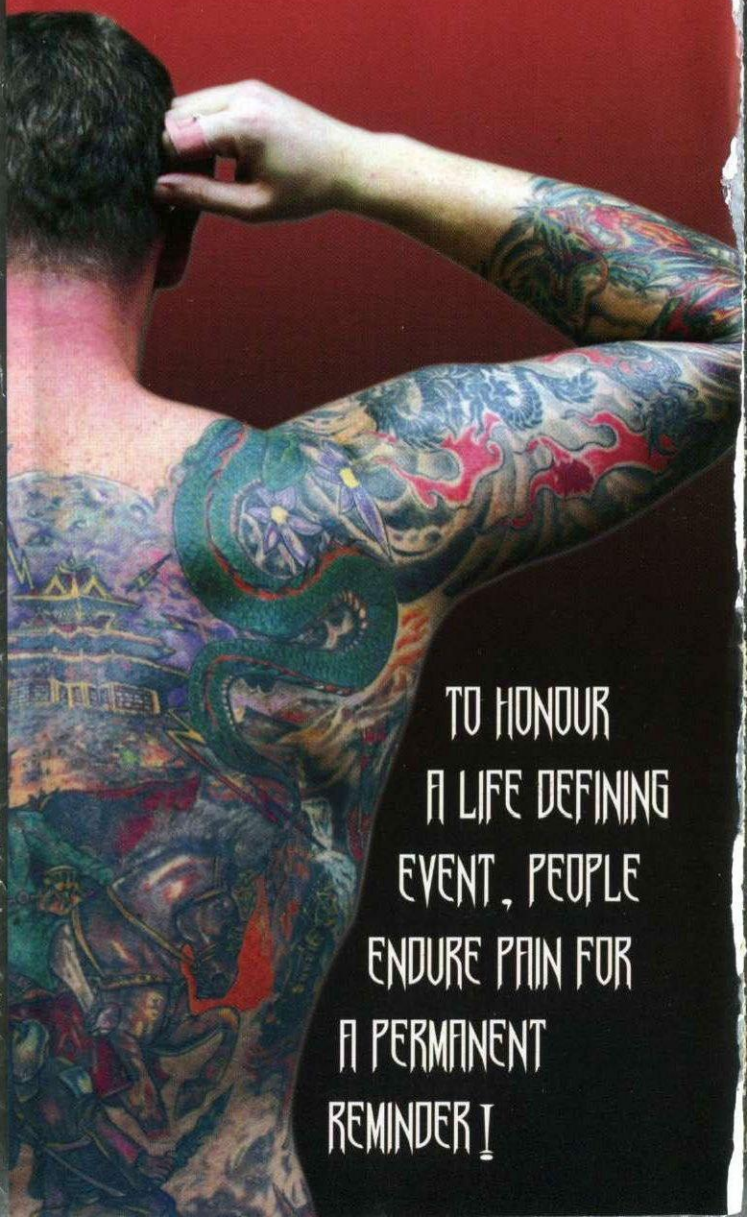

Hua Hin beach has been given 4-star status by the Govt. Agency (TAT) and is the second best beach in Thailand. The beach from Hilton to Khao Takiab is wide and ideal for swimming from infants to adults. It runs for five kms. with no. obstruction and has old trees for shade. Visitors can walk or jog all along the beach till Khao Takiab, where tall Buddha statue is in standing position.

All along, the small sois link the beach to the main Phetkasm road.

Cha am: Cha am beach's sand is equally fine with clean waters. Cha am existed on the Thai map, even four hundred years ago. The beach in front of Veranda Resort and Springfield condo, deserve a visit and try beach-side seafood restaurant.

Getting Around: One can walk around the Hilton Hotel towards the fishing pier and come out in front of the night market. Or take a walk in front of Sailom Pavilion, go straight to the railway station or turn left towards the Market Village. Take tri-shaw around or small four wheelers for long distance. Use reliable car rental to go to Pranburi, golf course, Mrigadayavan Palace or National Parks.

It's easy to tell when an underground enthusiasm like tattooing goes mainstream. People start referring to those who partake in it as a "community". Then magazines and conventions make their appearance. Further validation of tattooing comes from TV, where enthusiasts watch and wince at shows, that explore the illustrated life.

According to an American FDA survey, 45 million people (equally divided between genders) have at least one tattoo. Once restricted to only sailors and prisoners, ink art is now mass market and an ever increasing demand.

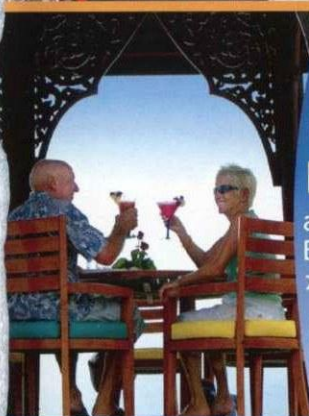

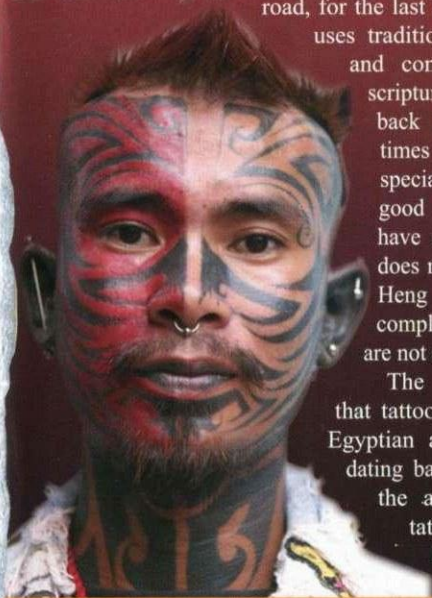

There seem to be nearly as many reasons for getting a tattoo as there are adherents. Some are impulse buys- an 17th birthday, religious fervour or relationship with an opposite sex. Cupid is the most popular subject and the worst, given that many relationships dissolve before the ink is even dry .

“ For everyone , the process of life is mysterious and unknowable. There are big and small unanswerable questions . Who will be rich or poor? The human beings have always been haunted , because of their inability to control their fate but they have been tempted to try to do so.

“ Khun Heng, a known Buddhist tattoo artist in Khao Sarn road, for the last four decades. He only uses traditional long iron needles and concentrate on Buddhist scriptures. The Thai tattoos go back 1000 years to Khmer times and culture. “To be a special person , you must have good behavior. The tattoos have no power, if a person does not adhere to good life.” Heng claims. “These are a complete belief system, they are not a quick fix”.

The Britannica indicates that tattoos have been found on Egyptian and Nubian mummies dating back about 2000 BC. After the advent of Christianity, tattooing was banned in Europe, but persisted in the Middle East and other parts of Asia. Moses, perhaps better known for his work with the Ten Commandments, lobbied against tattooing: "Ye shall not make any cutting in your flesh.....nor imprint any marks upon you." And tattooed Indians and Polynesians were such a novelty, that upon being discovered by Captain Cook's sailors in the mid-1700s were relegated to sideshow status in circuses and fairs in the United States and Europe.

Today, however, you'd be hard pressed to be in a room with 10 people and not have at least one person with a "tat,"- hidden or on display. Tattoos are noticeable among drivers of heavy vehicles, machinery workers mostly for their safety, than the work of an art. While young chefs, bartenders, painters and yuppies at present use ink markings as more of a trend, than have deep interest. However, most retail outlets and fast food places would not allow their staff to publically display their tattoos in Thailand.

Coloring in to the tattoos were introduced by Californian Native American tribes, while Eskimos and Easter Siberians made needle punctures through which a thread coated with pigment was drawn under the skin. The Maoris, Japanese, Burmese, Nigerians, Pima Indians of Arizona used different means to add color. The electric tattooing needle was patented in 1891. The US became the centre of tattoo influence at this time, with the creation of pattern sheets around the world.

People have to see if they are allergic to pigments and the needles are new, sealed and then sterilized. The shop it-self must have the sterilizer and see the artist at work. If you are carrying your own design, make sure the owner and the artist understands it well. Go through the websites to have some clue, but scared of being copied, the Thai silk has become popular world-wide. Only a few visitors can afford to leave Thailand without buying a piece of this fabric. Thai silk was originally used for dresses and clothing. Nowadays, it has become a popular material for upholstery, draperies and household furnishing. Countless shops in Thailand offer both plain and printed silk. The fabric has become more and more popular for fashion garments, plate mats, napkins, necktie and scarves. Some are used as a cover for notebooks, jewelry boxes, etc or eye-glass case.

Hua-Hin

THAI HANDICRAFTS

RACE TO THE WHITE HOUSE

FACE OFF

*Why the world has to closely monitor the US elections, inspite of being a marathon!
The person who walks
in to the White House,
is the most powerful,
influencial and watched
President in the world!*

The election campaign is a bit unusual for the rest of the world, where head of the government is elected in one day and there're no celebrations prior to that date. No caucus, no super delegates, in democracy, each voter has the equal right, irrespective of status. Probably the story is some what like American football-local turf! local rules!

The rules vary from state to state and from one party to another. The see saw battle between Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton would probably carry on to their national convention in July. Till February 20, Obama had 1,319 delegates, while the former First lady secured 1,245. Who-so-ever gets 2,025 delegates, would be nominated from the Democrat Party. The party introduced super delegate system in 1980, who can over turn the result of primaries. The party has 796 super delegates. In this election as the race is close, the role of super delegates is crucial. Former Presidents, VP's, House Speakers, experienced Senators make super delegates. Non Americans can call them senior leaders or politburo members. Some super delegates have already aligned with certain candidate. Hillary Clinton has 234 and Barack Obama 161, the balance undecided. The super delegates usually don't over rule majority votes, if the difference is wide, as it can create permanent split in the party.

Barack Obama 48, is a first-term senator from Illinois. He's civil rights attorney and has proposed legislation where companies have to verify their employees are legal residents, didn't vote in the war against Iraq, wants to pull the troops from Iraq. Obama is charismatic; some compare him with Ronald Reagan and John F. Kennedy.

On Super Tuesday memorable election-night speech he echoed "We are the CHANGE that we SEEK" – is unprecedented in recent memory.

The crowd retorted "Yes. We Can." was turned into a brilliant music video featuring an array of young, hip, talented and beautiful celebrities.

"This campaign is different than other campaigns for the President of the United States of America. It's different not because of me. It's different because of you." Obama's most effective lines "craziness of trying the same old thing in Washington and how come you expect a different result." He has the ability to inspire without focusing on specific issue or cause. He's facing tough going among the middle and upper middle working people. His base is Afro-Americans, celebrities and the young. He's married to Michelle, with two daughters.

In 1993, she headed a task force that proposed legislation to provide universal health care for all Americans, which was not passed, that's her main political goal, also to turn economy around, create more jobs, recall troops from Iraq within one year of her Presidency and softer approach to immigrants. Her voting base-big corporations, lobbyists, women and Hispanics. She simply knows more than Obama does. She has been far more likely to take questions from the press and public than Obama. That appeals to voters, who're more interested in results than in inspiration, it appeals to families. Her husband's attempts to point, Obama as a "race" candidate – only reinforced the strangely desperate nature of the campaign. She's still finding tough to convince "She is Tested, Trusted and Ready. Let's make it happen"! The Clintons have a daughter.

On February 20, Obama's victories extended his winning streak over Clinton to ten Democratic nominating contests. The next primaries are in Texas (228) and Ohio (161) on March 4. The last primaries are in Pennsylvania (188) on April 22. Which primary prove to be decisive, only time will tell. But history is in the making, either the President of the US will be a woman or black Afro-American. It should atleast bring conciliation than confrontation.

John McCain 72, Republican is senator from Arizona, married with seven children. He was POW in Vietnam for five years. McCain has called for "Greater Commitment in Iraq" and immigration reforms, that would provide illegal immigrants a path to citizenship. McCain has strengthened his claim to be the Republican nominee, but growing attacks from conservatives may hurt him in November. He has notched 918 delegates as compared to his closet rival Mike Huckabee 217. The target is 1,191.

SEPAK TAKRAW

A Unique Regional Sport!

Sepak Takraw (kick volleyball) is a concoction between volleyball, football and badminton. Invented 500 years ago in Malaysia, the official name Sepak (kick) was used in Malaysia and Indonesia and Takraw (Woven ball) in Thailand. Although played throughout the country but players from the North East are better skilled. Here, everyone just calls it Takraw, which in Malaysia and Indonesia it's spoken "Sepak Takraw".

No court or net was used initially while court was introduced first, followed by the net. The size of the court is the same as badminton, but here all galleries are not included. The net is five feet from the ground. Either side has one circle for serving and two half next to the net for tossing the ball to a player in the circle who's called a "Tekong", while the two players at the net are referred to as "Inside Left" and "Inside Right". In play only three players are allowed and are called "Regu". In a game each team has to give nine registered names and players could be rotated as per the coach. The points are counted like badminton till 15. In a game, there're three sets, if the first two are tied, the game is carried to the third, which has only six points. The ball is spherical with 12 holes made of woven rattan or synthetic rubber. It should also have 12 inter sections, weighing 170 gms, with 43 cm. in diameter. There're changes for women, where the ball is 150 gms and diameter is 42 cm.

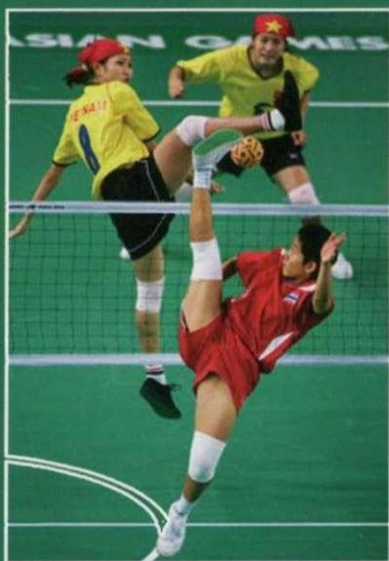

Each player has only one attempt to pass the ball and it could be passed using foot, knee, shoulder or head. The arm including fingers shouldn't touch the ball (like football). The battle to shoot the ball is thrilling at the net (like volleyball). Best use of the feet like bicycle kick or reverse kick shooting at 140 km. per hour, is at the net. The opposing players make an attempt either to block it at the net or receive and pass it to their player, or make a volley and shoot back. The ball shouldn't touch the floor.

The sport enhances co-ordination between an eye and foot, flexibility, acrobatics and leg strength. For the past eight years, Takraw is highly recommended for professional footballers in Europe.

Rain or sunshine, Takraw can be played indoor and out cheap (200-300 baht). It's an art and mastery of each individual player, how to dodge your opponents. The coach can ask for a time out, either for replacement or an advise. The Asian Games Committee had included Takraw from 1990 Beijing games using soft synthetic or plastic ball with twelve holes. The international Sepak Takraw Association is based in Bangkok with eighteen members countries.

Visitors heading for the beach and coming from Hua Hin after 15 Kms take left turn, where they see different hotels' sign. One can also come through Chaam/Hua Hin bypass, if you don't wish to go through two cities. Evason and Evason Hideaway are two premier resorts but it's not on the beach. A dirt public road is between hotel's rear and the sea. The same goes for Bacchus, Golden Pine, Tanao Sri and Pattawia. While small boutique hotels like Aleenta up to Beauty Beach are on the beach. It's worth going up Pranburi National Forest at Khao Kalok. Hotels like Privacy, Dolphin Bay and Anchana come under Sam Roi Yod. After Khao Kalok take right turn and go to the road, where you would see Dolphin Bay, Privacy and Anchana sign posts. One can try Bar-B-Que from the stalls or go to Seafood restaurant called Raan Chaew (Great food shop!) with squid sign post or have hotel's food.

It's safe and adventurous.

Troubled Waters Ahead !

If you were looking at stocks in key markets alone, you'd be cautiously optimistic about the economy. Federal Reserve had initially cut the interest rate.25 percent in Dec. followed by hefty. 75 percent on Jan 22. Who are right! Stocks or Credit? It's Credit! The hallmark of the current environment is the equity market lags the credit markets. To be sure, because of open financial markets, and massive US house mortgage crisis, the credit crunch has spread across and the stocks measure different things.

President Bush announced US$ 168 billion stimulus package on Feb 14, addressing the Congress. A Republican senator Bob Corker of Tennessee remarked "Springing $160 billion around the country and asking people to spend it quickly was not a solution worth debating or passing."

Another senator asked Federal Reserve Chairman and Treasury Secretary to identify how much of the stimulus money would need to be spent to have an effect on the economy in the second half of this year. The two officials avoided answering the question directly. But this package would only go out in May. Another financial executive in the New York said “Congress can’t hear any noise from people, its ears are stuffed with industry money.

American consumers need tax cuts, cut Medicare and slash entitlement spending. Consumers are paying more for their petrol, logistics, higher food prices, high inflation and no credit for housing or cars. Unemployment would continue to rise. How they would come out of it!

On top the US administration has spent $3trillion in Iraq and $ 1 trillion in Afghanistan and Pakistan since 2001. Weak domestic demand is expected to keep GDP below 2% in 2008.

As all economies are closely linked, the effect is global from EU, Japan, China and Australia.

Japan Economy

According to Jetro (Japan External Trade Regulatory Organisation), its GDP would be 1.8 % this year as compared to 2 % in 2007, 2.2 % in 2006 and 2.7% in 2005. Japan’s major markets are Asia (50%), US (12%) and EU (10%).

EU Economy: The economic growth in EU during 2007 was 2.8% down .1% as compared to spring forecast.

Although, EU economy started on a stray note in the beginning of 2007 but turbulence in US during summer has caused disorder. The slowdown in US economy would be compensated by China, India and the Middle East. Inflation was 2.2% in 2007, less than last year.

Trade with Russia and Central Asia since 2000 has shown strong growth. The trade with Japan is stable.

The sound economic fundamentals of the region wouldn’t have an impact on EU economy.

China Economy

The world economy would still run on Asian engine. In spite of weakening dollar, China's trade surplus is getting heftier. Big headache for the world is pegged Yuan to the dollar. Besides growth, inflation in China is rising rapidly.

China's vibrant growth is underpinned by net export gains and buoyant domestic demand, led by investment.

China has set-up strong foothold in Africa because of its energy needs. In spite of world condemnation, China has intensified its economic and diplomatic clout in Sudan and Zimbabwe.

IMF Managing Director, Dominique Strauss – Kahn during the G-7 financial heads in Tokyo on February 9, said "Government of countries representing a quarter of global output has room to use fiscal policy to support the world economy". Major oil and commodity exporting nations and others with large budget surpluses have room for some fiscal stimulus". These countries are in Asia, Latin America and Europe, which could act together to support the global economy. But the Chief doesn't realise it's "long way off"!

GOLFING IN HUA HIN

Royal Hua Hin golf course is the country's first course built in 1920. At present this belt has 8 courses; two belong to the state and the rest are private. Jack Nicholas has designed the first 18-holes of the Springfield. Imperial Lake View is 36-hole; Majestic and Springfield are 27-hole, while the rest are 18-holes. All courses offer pick-up at no extra charge. However, the city has few exclusive golf handling companies. Except the two state owned courses, others offer accommodation. The Palm Hills at present is the only one selling residential units. Black Mountain is the latest addition opened in April this year. The first tee-off starts at 6.00 AM.

One Day Trip

Khao Takiap

Mountain with chopstick—that is what it means literally. Travel past Hyatt Regency and stay left, past fisherman's village. The road gets steep and there are stalls selling merchandise made of sea shells. There is a Buddhist temple at top of the hill while going sideways. On going straight there is an open area where beautiful Chinese Goddess is built. There will be many monkeys on the way. Evenings are very pleasant here.

Mrigadayavan Palace

This all teak summer Palace was built in 1923 by HM King Rama VI. The palace stands on 1,080 concrete pillars and houses King's bedroom, working room, receiving guests including his personal belongings. Corridors are long and airy. Wear loose and comfortable clothes with cap and sun glasses.

Open daily from 8.30 – 16.30 hrs.

Snorkeling Tour

What's in Store!

We thought the political uncertainty was behind us, with an appointment of Samak Sundaravej as the Thailand's 25th Prime Minister.

Samak's PPP party
five other

coalition parties, command comfortable 362 members in the House of 485. People were expecting the economic team to have at least one recognised member but sadly they're either doctors or marketers. The cabinet has three ladies, who happen to be the wives of banned politicians, with no political experience.

Prime Minister Samak before the Royal audience did say, "the cabinet is a bit tainted but this was the best he could achieve, they should be given chance to prove their integrity, selflessness and acumen".

H.M.the King at the swearing-in-ceremony, advised "they have high responsibility on their shoulders and people expectations are high. Without naming any country, the King said few politicians of neighboring countries haven't delivered, so you guys should n't do the same. Do good for the country, irrespective of how much, Thai's would remember and respect you more".

The eagle eyed reporters had bagful of questions for the leader and his team, after the first cabinet meeting on February 5. The Prime Minister wanted to initiate nine mass transit lines instantly. The Finance Minister wished to remove 30% reserve rule and emphasize more on growth than stability. The first-time health minister announced he's going to annul Compulsory licensing of three life saving drugs.

The Cabinet has six Deputy Prime Ministers, three inexperienced women ministers of banned politicians. Thaksin's lawyer as Foreign Minister and brother-in-law as Deputy Prime Minister.

The colorful Chalerm Yoobumrung, the interior minister threw bombshell of giving limited autonomy to the three troubled provinces in the south, without consulting the Prime Minister and the army.

It was a fiery start but an alert Samak contained the fizz, everything has to be carefully reviewed PM echoed. The other sensitive issue was, when it's the best time to allow the self-exiled Thaksin Shinawatra to be welcomed as a triumphant hero.

The cabinet was hardly one week old, when an ad hoc election commission said House Speaker Yongyuth Tiypairat, a close confidant of Thaksin, committed an electoral fraud.

He has to go but the PPP future is at stake now. The fate of the ruling party is hanging by a thread. Let's see if the Supreme Court and the Constitutional Court make a decision based on law or save the country politically.

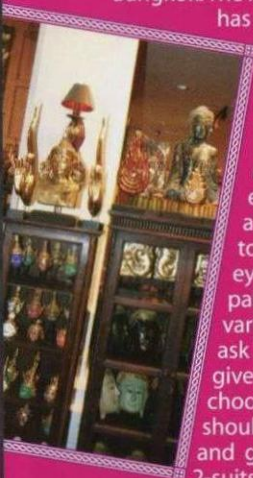

Prime Minister Samak has done well till now, he's reflecting conflicting personality but a sincere Royalist. During the weekly live broadcast on February 17, he caused a big stir "An invible hand is back in action". It's asking for PPP's blood and destroy political climate in the country" But Samak is a changed man, he's calm, composed and left the fate of the govt. in the hands of destiny. The time would tell whether the administration is run by Mr. S or Mr. T.

hopping is a big bargain and is must for every visitor. Hua Hin has undergone tremendous changes, enticing every kind of shopping, one doesn't need to come to Bangkok. The Hua Hin Market Village, opp. The Marriott has branded clothing, footwear, paintings, antiques, home products and DVD's. On the main Phetkasem road, right from the King's Palace, European home furniture shops covering bedroom, kitchen accessories, bathroom fittings, decoration items, Jewelry shops, tailoring, eye glasses, Thai Silk and cotton wear all abound on both sides of the road. In town opposite The Hilton, shops selling eye and sun glasses, tailoring, carpets, paintings and decorative items offer great variety at bargain prices. Going for Thai Silk ask for two ply material, it's thicker and gives good fall. Getting suits stitched choose the material carefully and price should include imported shoulder padding and good lining. Do not go for deals like 2-suits, 3-shirts and one tie US$ 199.00, this is only to bring you inside the shop. Also avoid strongly recommended shops by your guide, there is some benefit included. Go for rather high-end, quality products for long lasting and satisfaction.

For Jewelry, take extra care, go for govt. (TAT) recognized shops with buy back guaranteed certificate. There are now two shops selling leather jackets and shoes. Bargaining is part of the norms, but you are advised to go for sensible bargaining and then must buy.

Buying A House

If you're looking for a house or condominium in Cha-am, Hua Hin and Pranburi area, don't have second thoughts. You are making the right decision to start with. It stands on certain reasoning like the King stays here most of the time, so there is hardly any crime, no gangs or drug pushers. The price of the land has increased every year for the past five years. This is not a 24 hrs city like Bangkok and Pattaya. Their late night activities are restricted to one soi and are far off from residential districts. No traffic snarls and people are very humble as compared to city dwellers.

The city is well planned with good infrastructure like roads, water and sewage in place. All districts of Prachuab Khirikhan are relatively clean and picturesque. Any property has to be 20 meters from where the sea touches the beach. This law covers the whole of Thailand.

If you're buying newly constructed condominium closer to the beach, it can go maximum of four storeys but higher storeys are available as you go further away from the beach. There are units available in high rise condos; one has to go to real estate agent to office you choice. High rise condos have been built before the new regulation came into effect. Now, you're on the lookout for renting or buying a place to live.

The best choice is to go through a reputable and well known real estate dealer. Most of the dealers here are foreigners. If you're renting a place, you will have to pay a surcharge or in certain cases agents take commission from the owner. In the first instance, you will be signing a contract with the real estate agency and the company will look after its maintenance in all aspects. In the second scenario, the contract will be signed between you and the owner, who will take care of the maintenance. Normally, two-three months rental is kept as deposit depending on the furniture inside the house. It's better to transfer the telephone line in your name in order to clear long distance call bills.

The other big step is the precautions to be taken while you indulge in buying a property or land. The law states foreigners can't buy land in the first place. So if you have a trust-worthy Thai partner or companion, do it through his or her name, plain and simple. But when you don't have anyone, then where to go? You form a company which has seven or more than seven shareholders and foreigners own 49% or less and your estate company should arrange the 51% balance. This you're doing by registering a company, where lawyer involvement is a must. In a company, the number of Thai shareholders always has to be one higher than foreign shareholders. The registration fee is about Baht 30,000. There are 2-3 real estate lawyers in Hua Hin. In July 2006, Thai government issued directives; like Thai shareholders have to show their financial statement and few shareholders might have to go to the land department.

Your developer or broker will arrange. In company formation, you have to have few transactions and make balance sheet. This process is not used unless, your company is actually doing healthy business. You should have the power of attorney to sign all the documents.

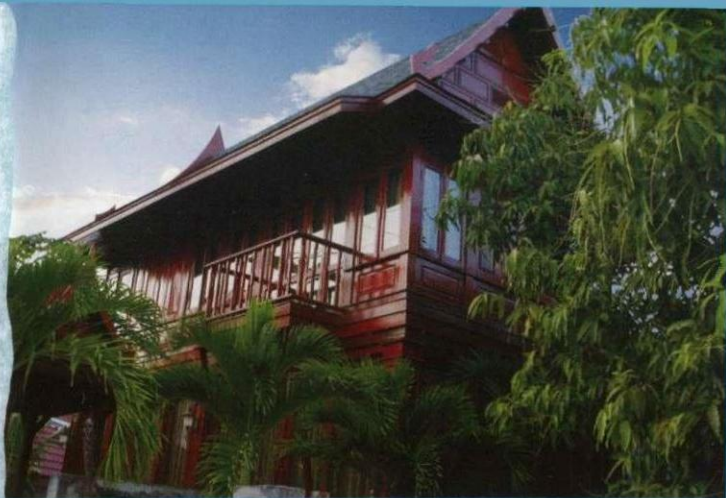

Before you enter into an agreement, discuss payment terms, like when foundation is laid, so much amount, when walls are completed, so much will be transferred and so on. There's a penalty clause in case the developer delays the construction.

Please ensure the money is paid into the account of real estate company and not into any individual's account and you must have the receipt. Work with a real estate agent who has been in existence for few years and have good track record. Once you have seen the constructed house, you need to make sure water; sewage and electricity are in place. Buy a house which is facing south or east so that afternoons are cool even in the summer.

If you're buying a constructed house, you're not going to pay 5.5% to the government; it's the responsibility of the seller. There is minimal land tax in Thailand. For a newly constructed house, there is a house registration fee of 2% charged by real estate developer, or you can hire a lawyer to do it. You should find time to see the progress, as construction is going on.

See fittings are of good standard and if you want any alterations, you still have time to do it. Thailand does have problems in ceiling leakage and drainage system, if it's not rainy season, pour water on the roof to check leakage. The rooms should be airy and cross ventilated. There are interior design companies in Hua Hin who can assist. Furniture, kitchen and electrical appliances have sprouted along Phetchkasem starting from Soi 23 (Index Living Mall to Khao Tao). Market Village has Home Pro on second floor; one can buy from bed sheets to bath tubs. Tesco Lotus is an extensive grocery store. The Cabinet, a Swedish managed furniture shop before Shell petrol station has good furniture and fully functional kitchen.

To lease a property altogether for 60 years is another good option. Lawyer is needed, so he makes the contract in lessee's interest, so lease could be renewed every 30 years. The lessee can also sell whenever he wishes. Here no company formation and balance sheet is needed. Government has recently launched long stay resident scheme. A government enterprise has been set-up with Tourism Authority of Thailand (TAT) holding 30%. The buyer can lease with this agency and it in return signs with developer. Please consult your good lawyer. There is a treaty of Amity signed between Thailand and USA, where US citizens can own 100% of the company.

When you're buying a condo, the regulations are different. Suppose the total area (constructed and non-constructed) is 100,000 sq meters, a foreigner can buy only 49% of the total area.

If a public road leading to the condominium is to be constructed or you want to check status of 49% shareholding, only a real estate company can check, as all papers are in Thai and one has to go to the land department.

The owner of the individual condo has to pay extra monthly for maintenance of common area, swimming pool and security guards etc.

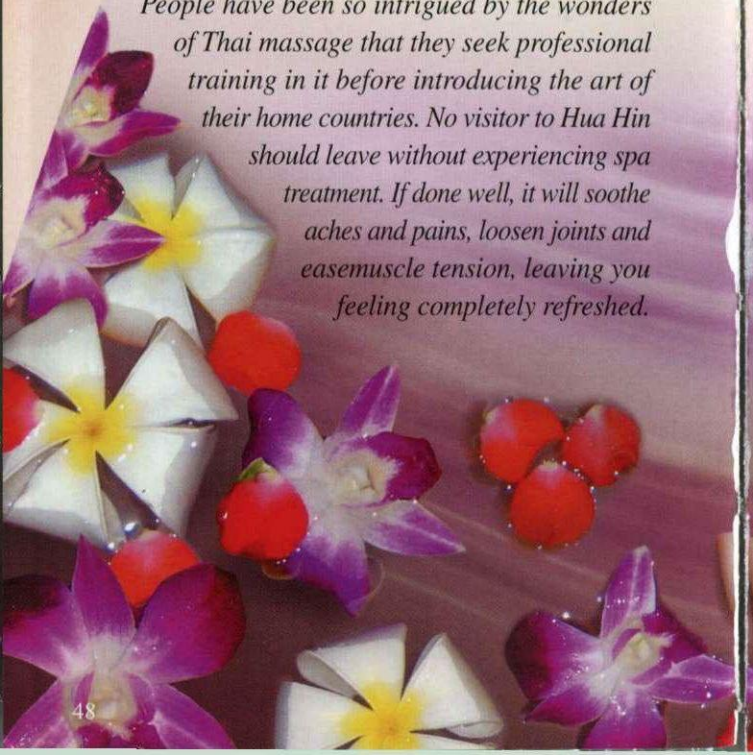

Hopefully this would give you enough guidance and thoughts when you're buying a property. Of course you need to bear things like who is in your neighborhood, security issue, when you're not in Thailand and so forth.

Rejuvenating Ourselves - Spa

Thailand, also termed the land of wats (temples), is one of Asia's best destinations for a spa getaway. Thai spas are well-known for their luxurious surroundings and can be found throughout the southern beach of Hua Hin, Cha am and Pranburi. Of all treatments offered in the spa, the most popular and famous one is the Thai Massage. People have been so intrigued by the wonders of Thai massage that they seek professional training in it before introducing the art of their home countries. No visitor to Hua Hin should leave without experiencing spa treatment. If done well, it will soothe aches and pains, loosen joints and ease muscle tension, leaving you feeling completely refreshed.

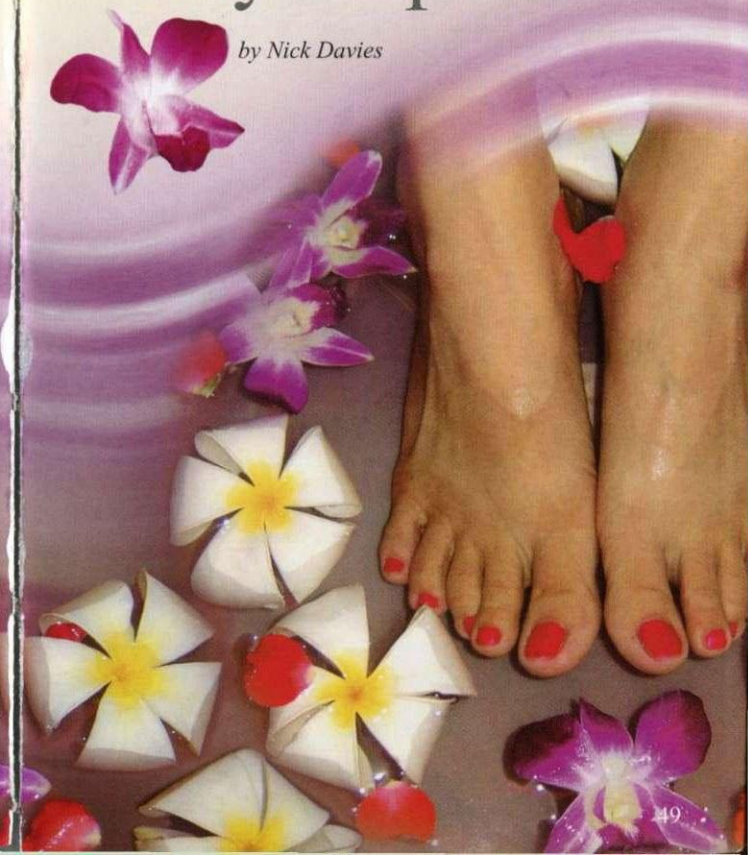

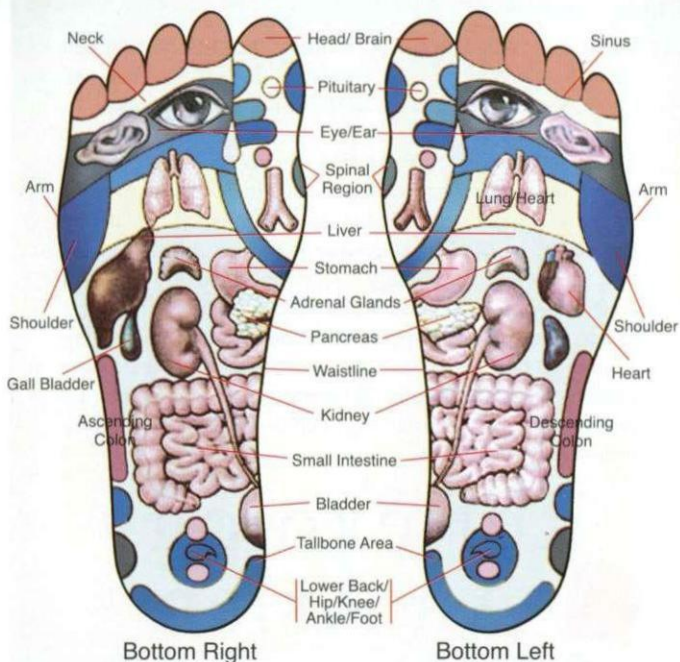

Foot massage or reflexology is one of the most popular and cheapest kinds of massage available all over Thailand and virtually every street has at least one reflexology clinic.

There is debate as to the actual origins of using pressure points on the feet to treat not only the feet but various internal organs and glands that correspond and are stimulated by particular pressure points on the sole of the foot. Some say reflexology's roots lie in traditional Asian style massage techniques while others advocate that early Western doctors are responsible for developing and refining foot massage techniques, better known there as 'Zone therapy.' The ancient Egyptians also left behind inscriptions and stone carvings that depict people receiving reflexology treatments.

Reflexology -An Asian Mystique

by Nick Davies

Personally, the notion that foot massage was developed in the East seems to be much more realistic as it contains elements of the traditional massage that was developed through Buddhist temples around Indo-China many centuries ago.

Considering the amount of time we spend on our feet, they are a part of the body that need a lot of attention but unfortunately rarely get the treatment they need. Being the lowest part of the body, there is a constant battle with gravity going on in these lower regions. The feet are often where crystalline deposits in our body fluids end up. These build up over time and, cause blockages that restrict the movement of fluids around the body.

These deposits of 'crystals' are broken down during a foot massage, releasing them back into the blood stream where they will eventually make their way to the bladder to be expelled from the body.

Having these crystals crushed by the strong thumbs of a reflexologist can be a very painful experience and makes you wonder why you decided to pay for such treatment but after a few minutes of circulating thumb pressure, a feeling of euphoria follows the pain as the warming sensation of 'new blood' surges into the previously blocked areas. It's for this reason that people undergoing foot massage should also drink lots of tea, which will help the fluids circulate and dislodge the crystals.

It's quite surprising the range of organs and glands that can be treated with reflexology, including the sinuses, pancreas, kidneys, prostate, bladder and lymph areas, to name a few.

Apart from the hardened hands of a reflexologist, there are a few tools for the trade too. There are numerous self foot massage tools like 'cobble stone' mats and wooden rollers or balls that can be used while sitting.

Thai foot massage therapists usually have a short, tapered piece of wood with rounded fat and thin ends which is used to press down on the various pressure points. This really hurts, especially when applied to the tips of the toes, which is invariably where a foot massage starts. Again, the pain is short lived and almost instantly gratifying as you feel the energy rushing around the joints.

Obviously, the idea of letting someone else get near your feet can be a bit daunting, especially if it's been a hot day or your feet have been working up a sweat in a stuffy pair of socks. It shouldn't be too much to worry about though as there will be somewhere to wash your feet or the masseur may wash them for you in scented water and alcohol to kill bacteria.

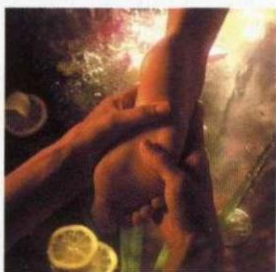

Although no one claims that Reflexology will cure illnesses and ailments, it is hailed as being extremely beneficial in the relief of things like sports, stress conditions, digestive disorders, hormonal imbalances, Arthritis and even infertility.

Like most forms of treatment, just one reflexology session may offer instant relief but it is usually necessary to undergo a course of several foot massage sessions in order to experience longer lasting positive results.

Acne, for example, can be treated with foot massage, which is actually treating the internal organs that can be responsible for an outbreak of spots like the Liver, gall bladder, adrenal gland, bladder and kidneys.

Some might be interested to know that allergies can also be relieved with foot massage and treatment is aimed at targeting the Parathyroid glands, adrenal glands, kidneys and bladder.

If you own a business with employees and you're looking for a way to increase productivity and reduce sick days, offering regular reflexology treatments to your employees on a regular basis could be the answer. A reflexology treatment trial in Denmark with 1450 postal worker employees over a 3 year period dramatically reduced the number of sick days taken by employees and is said to have saved the company the equivalent of 110,000 Pounds.

So whether it's for yourself, a friend or as a treat for your staff, a few sessions of foot pummeling is a great way to get you back on your feet and could help save you future hospitalization for untreated disorders and may even save you a bit of cash too!

Every hotel which has spa in this area have reflexology, great ambiance and certified masseurs. Guests will find plentiful shops in front of Sofitel, Hilton hotels. These shops are positively cheaper but they don't offer the same environment.

Spirit Houses

Spirit houses are inherent part of Thai culture. You will find them virtually everywhere, in the courtyard of the houses, in front of the shopping malls and even outside business establishments. In fact it is essential to put a spirit house before official opening of any building.

These spirit houses are intended as abode for the spirits. It is a belief among the Thais that there are guardian spirits which protect the land, and it is important to appease them by providing a dwelling for them. They look like miniature temples set atop a tall pedestal; some of these even resemble a typical Thai house. Inside these houses you can see miniature figures like dancers, married couples, which are intended as servants of the guardian spirit. The animal figurines like horses and elephants are kept as the modes of transport. These spirit houses are constructed of teakwood, concrete or glass. Thais pay respect to these shrines by burning incense sticks and also by holding their hands together (perform a "wai"). The offerings are made in the form of fruits like oranges, grapes, guavas, rice and even colourful Fanta bottles with straws.

You can even see beautiful colorful piece of cloth tied to the pedestal on which the spirit house stands. These clothes are meant to adorn the spirits residing in the miniature houses. These drapes when become old, are replaced with new shining ones.

If there is a need to place new spirit house, the old ones are discarded at a wat or temple, or at a place where other spirit houses have been discarded. Many westerners while on a visit here, buy these spirit houses as a decoration accessory for their house. Few years back when David and Victoria Beckham visited Hua Hin, couldn't resist buying one for their home in England.

The popularity of these spirit houses globally can be gauged by the fact that they are available even on internet. You can buy even one at ebay website.

The animism-belief in spirits is deep rooted and is inter-twined with Buddhism. This custom has only strengthened with time. This reverence towards the spirits is epitome of the fact that Thais like to live in harmony with everybody including the spirits!

Buffalo Bill's

*On the corner of Chomsin and Naresdamri
Tel: 032-530-087*

Last Sunday I was down on a breezy corner at Buffalo Bill's restaurant where I read that they've just celebrated 10 years of serving some of the best food in Hua Hin. Their extensive menu which starts with all day breakfasts with good English pork sausages, real back bacon, black pudding and thick cut toast. For the health conscious there was a fresh fruit platter with muesli & yogurt, and many other dishes in between, with fantastic sausage and eggs Benedict.

For lunch I could choose between fresh cut sandwiches, B.L.T's or filled jacket potatoes with some exiting fresh salads. On Sunday's there's a big roast of Argentine Angus beef rump and Australian leg of lamb and much more. I was told that if I still had room I should try the homemade apple pie or chocolate brownie and whipped cream!

The evenings have European favourites like Bavarian pork knuckle with home made sauerkraut and creamed spinach, Beer battered north Atlantic Cod, mushy peas, home made Tartar sauce and pickled onions of course served in newspaper just like the old time chippie. Argentine Angus beef steak's are char grilled to your satisfaction. There's Australian Frenched rack of lamb, the list goes on and on, is your mouth watering yet? The contemporary Thai food is guaranteed to have no MSG flavour enhancers.

To get there, when you're facing the Hilton Hotel on Naresdamri Road turn to your left and take a 3 or 4 minute walk to the corner of Chomsin and Naresdamri Rd, opposite the pier entrance where the fishing boats come in. You can enjoy some real good home cooking, I did.

Buffalo Bill's has new roof top terraced apartments for holiday rentals with the best views in Hua Hin you can check out rooms and menu at www.buffalobillshuahin.com

Bill told me with a cheeky grin "children and vegetarian are welcome, we also cater for wedding, christenings, Bar Mitzvah, funerals and hangings."
